

The Turning Point

Key Word: Messiah

Key Verse: "He said to them, 'But who do you say that I am?'" Matthew 16:15

One day, James Butler missed his stop. It was very unusual, for he was a person who kept strictly to the same timetable. The milkman, the postman, and the paperboy all set their time by him. "There he goes," they'd say, "we must be on time today."

On this particular day, something happened that upset James Butler's routine and caused him to miss his stop. An elderly woman sat next to him on the train, and started to talk to him. It was annoying. James wanted to read his paper, but the woman said, "Good morning."

James was surprised, but as he listened she began to reveal her entire life story to him. James found himself reluctantly listening. As she talked on, telling him about her childhood some eighty years ago in a remote part of Africa, James became fascinated. She spoke with such love about the people she'd known as a child, and tears came into her eyes as she compared the past to those people now living in hunger and the threat of violence always near.

James had seen pictures on the news of starving people and had felt sorry for them. He'd even occasionally sent some money for them. But it had never really struck him before that they were real people with homes and families and friends.

He noticed a strange feeling in his heart as the woman spoke. Just after that, he realized he'd missed his stop. He leapt to his feet, excused himself briefly, and jumped off the train at the next station. He began to walk toward his office, checking his watch and realizing that he'd probably be late for the first time ever.

He also realized that he didn't care. He passed a poster showing a gaunt, African woman holding a tiny, undernourished child staring out at him with beseeching eyes, his heart leaped within him. He calmly walked back to the station, boarded a train, and made his way to the address given on the poster.

James Butler never did return to his office. He went out to Africa and studied, then he returned to England and devoted his life to raising money to help disadvantaged people. His routine disappeared, he faced danger, he lost touch with all his friends, and he had no money for himself, but for the first time ever, he felt gloriously free and alive in a new and exciting way. He never saw the old lady again, but he never forgot her, either.
